Truth is in. Myths are out.

Myth: Red cars get more speeding tickets.

Busted: There are several plausible theories why this myth could be true; trouble is, there's no data to support any of the theories, much less the myth itself. The same can be said for the belief that "all life insurance is created equal" – although all policies seem to serve the same purpose, the differences can be profound. The safety and security of your whole life policy depends on the insurer you purchase it from. And with the customization options of riders or other special features, no two policies are the same.
